

Electronic Media

- There are two types of electronic media—computer and non-computer. Computer sources include computer software, CD-ROMs, and the Internet. Non-computer sources include audiotapes, videotapes, films, film strips, television, and radio.
- To find information on the Internet, use a search engine and type in your keywords. Be specific. It's a good idea to use two or more keywords.

Directions Use the list of electronic media below to answer the questions.

Electronic Media Source List

- “Interviews with Japanese Travelers” (Public Radio taped interview program)
- Traveling in Japan (CD-ROM with printable navigation maps)
- The Japanese History Site (Internet site that describes Japan's history)
- Food in Japan (DVD of Japan's most exotic foods)
- The Japanese in America During World War II (Filmstrip that shows life in the Japanese internment camps)

1. Which source would be helpful in writing a report on Japan for school?

the Web site about Japan's history

2. Why would Traveling in Japan be a helpful source if you were planning a road trip around Japan?

The CD-ROM has maps that you could print out.

3. Which source do you think was produced more recently: Food in Japan or The Japanese in America During World War II? Why?

Food in Japan*; it uses newer technology than a filmstrip.

4. What keywords might you type into a search engine to get the Web site The Japanese History Site?

You could type in Japan and history.

5. If you needed to use a quote in your report about what travelers think about the United States, what source would you use?

“Interviews with Japanese Travelers”