

Snapshot Response to “Prudy’s Problem and How She Solved It”
by Carey Armstrong-Ellis

1. At the end of the story Prudy learned something important. What did she learn?

Prudy learned the importance of solving her own problems.

2. This story is a fantasy. What makes it a fantasy? What could not really happen in real life?

Possible response: Prudy’s collections were exaggerated. One day Prudy’s room swelled up and then burst. It doesn’t seem possible that someone could start a museum, because building a museum can cost millions of dollars.

3. Prudy’s huge group of things flew all over the room. Rewrite this sentence using two of the boldface words from the Selection Snapshot in place of the underlined words.

Possible response: Prudy’s enormous collection of things was scattered all over the room.
